We were recently at a local family friends' house over the holidays, and we wanted to share with you what we experience when we gather with them and what we love about our Christian friends here in Romania. We love how they weave God into our conversations, how they anticipate and frequently speak about the Lord's return with an eagerness and joy, how they make it their ambition to lead a quiet life, minding their own business and working with their hands (1 Thessalonians 4:11), . . . and through this way of living they actually live very loud lives and herald the message that godliness with contentment is great gain (1 Timothy 6:6). Their faithfulness and perseverance in everyday life have an impact that reverberates against the human ambition that so often wants to make a name and glory for oneself. It is refreshing. We often admire their hard work ethic and the way that they make the best of what they have and also generously share with others. I know Romania, just like any other country, has their deeply rooted issues and there is much need to shine His light and love in this place, but there is also so much beauty and community and the very fingerprints of God's love and goodness that we have seen here.

Romania has been a place and a people God has allowed our hearts to deeply love and appreciate. We have truly felt blessed to be a part of this community and learn from them as we sought to "move into the neighborhood" and "dwell among them." It is the example that our humble Savior has shown us and walked before us. One of our greatest needs as humans is to be seen and loved, and we hope and pray that is what was felt by our neighbors, friends, and strangers. Though we did this imperfectly, we pray that people were able to see glimpses and tangibly feel the love of our gracious God.
